

Tiffany Hayes, Ph.D. is a clinical psychologist with expertise in mental health services research, intervention development, and community-based participatory research (CBPR), serves as Director of TRI's Community Engagement Core.

Haynes is an Associate Professor in the Department of Health Behavior and Health Education within the Fay W. Boozman College of Public Health. She has served as principal investigator on several National Institutes of Health (NIH) and Patient-Centered Outcome Research Institute (PCORI) funded grants that focus on the development of mental health interventions that can be utilized within community-based settings such as churches.

Currently, Haynes is the PI of a NIMHD-funded study that seeks to test the effectiveness of a faith-based depression intervention in partnership with 24 churches across Arkansas. Additionally, Haynes is a co-founder of the Arkansas FAITH Network, a coalition of places of worship, health care organizations, and health researchers, that partner together to reduce health disparities in Arkansas.

Dr. Haynes earned her master's and doctorate degrees in clinical psychology from the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, MI.
